Introduction.....	1
I. ADA Basics
I.1: What employers are covered under the ADA?.....	3
I.2: Who is protected against employment discrimination?.....	4
I.3: Can you give me some practical guidance on what types of impairments would fall under the ADA and which ones wouldn't?.....	4
I.4: We've had requests for accommodations from several employees with a number of different ailments. We're unsure, however, of whether they fall under the ADA, since their ailments seem common. So we're curious as to how the courts have interpreted the phrase "a qualified individual with a disability.".....	5
I.5: One of our stockboys is severely hearing impaired. But it doesn't prevent him from satisfactorily performing his job. For purposes of the ADA, is he a "qualified individual with a disability"?.....	5
I.6: How can you tell if an impairment is sufficiently severe to substantially limit a major life activity?.....	5
I.7: Are there any guidelines I can use to determine when a person is considered to be substantially limited in working?.....	5
I.8: We're currently interviewing for an entry-level position. One of the applicants has a disability. Does the ADA require that we give preference to the individual with the disability over other applicants?.....	6
I.9: A full-time employee receives full health benefits. Due to becoming disabled, we accommodated her with a part-time schedule. Can we now terminate the employee's benefits?.....	6
I.10: We were thinking of instituting a sick leave policy whereby employees would be required to submit a doctor's note after each sick leave absence, including a brief diagnosis of the condition, a statement that the employee was unable to work during the absence, and the anticipated return to work date. Would such a policy run afoul of the ADA?.....	6
I.11: Does the ADA protect individuals from disability-based harassment?.....	6
I.12: What is meant by the phrase "association discrimination"?.....	7

II. Accommodations

II.1: What is a “reasonable accommodation”?	10
II.2: An employee has asked for an accommodation. What kinds of actions are we required to take to reasonably accommodate her?	10
II.3: Do we always have to grant an employee’s accommodation request?	10
II.4: One of our employees limps and is constantly rubbing his lower back. His job requires a lot of bending and lifting. We suspect he may have a disability, but he hasn’t said a word to us. Are we required to accommodate him?	10
II.5: Does the ADA outline specific steps that all employers must follow when it comes to granting reasonable accommodations?	11
II.6: An employee requested that she work a reduced schedule. We asked her to provide us with a doctor’s note, explaining the necessity for such an accommodation. A month has passed, and we still have not received any medical documentation. Is it permissible for us to have her examined by our own health care provider?	11
II.7: An employee presented us with a request for an accommodation two days ago. What is the time period for processing such requests?	11
II.8: An employee mentioned his need for a light-duty position due to recent surgery. But he never put his request in writing. So we don’t have to provide him with an accommodation, right?	11
II.9: One of our employees who has a disability requested that he be accommodated by a transfer to another shift, which happens to be one of the most desirable shifts we have. The problem is, according to a collective bargaining agreement, employees are selected for that shift based on seniority. If we don’t grant the employee’s accommodation request, will we find ourselves in violation of the ADA?	12
II.10: As an accommodation, one of our employers has requested an extended period of leave. We’re afraid this might cause an undue hardship. What’s our next move?	12
II.11: Do we have to change a person’s supervisor as a form of reasonable accommodation?	12
II.12: An employee who has epilepsy has requested that she be allowed to telecommute. We’re in the process of determining whether or not this is a feasible accommodation for us. If a court were in our shoes, what elements would it take into consideration?	12
II.13: What is meant by the phrase “interactive process”?	13

II.14: What are my responsibilities when it comes to that interactive process?	13
II.15: During the interactive process, an employee brought up the accommodation idea of reassignment. We're giving this idea strong consideration. But what factors should we mull before making our final decision?	13
II.16: We have an informal policy by which we try to grant an accommodation within a week of the request. However, due to recent cutbacks, managers have been working double shifts and haven't been able to engage in the interactive process. Are we treading on legally hostile ground?	14
II.17: I've heard that term "essential function." How exactly do I determine the essential functions of a job?	14
II.18: Is pregnancy covered under the ADA?	14
II.19: How should we go about treating an employee with a confirmed diagnosis of AIDS?	15
II.20: We recently hired an employee with a hearing impairment. Do you have any tips for dealing with such an employee in the workplace that won't result in us crossing over the ADA line?	15
II.21: We are a new company and have limited resources. Are there any relatively inexpensive ideas out there for accommodating different disabilities?	15

III. Mitigating Measures

III.1: What are "mitigating measures"?	17
III.2: We are thinking of creating a general policy whereby managers ask all employees what prescription medications they are taking. Is this legal under the ADA?	17
III.3: An employee who uses a hearing aid has asked for an accommodation. But company policy holds that employees have perfect hearing for safety reasons. With the hearing aid the employee does have perfect hearing. So are we still required to accommodate her?	17
III.4: How do we apply such rulings to situations involving mitigating circumstances in the workplace?	18

IV. Hiring/Testing

IV.1: Are there any hiring questions I can't ask under the ADA? If yes, what questions can I ask?	19
---	----

IV.2: During a hiring interview, can I probe for accommodations that may be necessary?	20
IV.3: What is meant by the phrase a “disability-related inquiry”?	20
IV.4: Are the rules about when an employer may make disability-related inquiries and require medical examinations the same for employees and applicants?	20
IV.5: How exactly does the ADA define a “medical examination”?	21
IV.6: Are there any procedures or tests employers may require that would not be considered medical examinations?	21
IV.7: We suspect that an employee is suffering from a disability and are considering asking her to submit to a medical exam since she works in a safety-sensitive position. When does the ADA allow us to ask her a disability-related question and require her to submit to a medical examination?	21
IV.8: We have an employee who wants to return to work after a disability-related absence. Are we permitted to ask her disability-related questions and/or require that she submit to a medical examination?	21
IV.9: What does the ADA require concerning the confidentiality of medical information acquired in post-offer medical examinations and inquiries?	21
IV.10: When can we legitimately withdraw a job offer to an applicant with a disability?	22
IV.11: We are faced with rehiring an employee who we know has a disability. What kinds of inquiries are we allowed to make during the rehire phase of employment?	22
IV.12: What’s the best way to use job descriptions when evaluating the hiring potential of a person with a disability?	22
IV.13: We are looking to fill a manual labor position. Since the job requires vast amounts of physical work, are we allowed to ask applicants if they suffer from any disabilities?	22
IV.14: A person who is confined to a wheelchair has applied for a position as an EMT. Does the ADA apply to him?	22
IV.15: An employee happened to mention a co-worker’s disability to a supervisor in a lunchtime conversation. How should we handle the situation since we became privy to the information via a third party?	24

V. Safety/Health

V.1: Does the ADA take safety issues into account?	25
V.2: One of our employees suffers from limited mobility. We're concerned that he might pose a direct threat to himself and co-workers, since fast action is often necessary on the job. Is it permissible for us to have him examined by our own health care provider?	25
V.3: An employee who operates heavy machinery is currently on prescription medication, which has a side effect for some that diminishes concentration and/or coordination. Does the employee pose a direct threat based solely on the fact that she is taking this medication?	25
V.4: Our company is aware that under the ADA we have the right to refuse to hire individuals with disabilities who pose a direct threat to the health or safety of others. But what if the only threat the individual poses is to him/herself?	26
V.5: One of our employees is claiming that he is disabled under the ADA because the medication he takes prevents him from safely driving himself to and from work. But we don't think that his reasoning passes legal muster. Who's right?	26

VI. Substance Abuse

VI.1: It has come to our knowledge that one of our employees is currently using illegal drugs. Is it safe to terminate her?	27
VI.2: What about a recreational drug like marijuana? Is that considered a disability?	27
VI.3: Is testing for illegal drugs permissible under the ADA?	27
VI.4: Is addiction to alcohol considered a disability?	27
VI.5: What are the ADA rules when it comes to periodic alcohol testing?	28
VI.6: Can we ask applicants about their current illegal drug use?	28
VI.7: Can we ask applicants about their drinking habits?	28

VII. Mental Impairments

VII.1: What is a "mental impairment" under the ADA?	29
VII.2: What major life activities are limited by mental impairments?	29

VII.3: When an employee’s wife left him a few weeks ago, he became distressed. Although he continues his daily routine, he sometimes becomes agitated at work. He sought counseling and was diagnosed with short-term “adjustment disorder.” How long does a mental impairment have to last for it to be substantially limiting?.....29

VII.4: An employee who was caught stealing from her cash draw claims that her misconduct was the result of her disability. Are we within legal lines to discipline the employee, as per our company’s policy?.....29

VII.5: I’ve heard that the inability to get along with others can be considered a major life activity under the ADA. Is this true?.....30

VIII. Disability Benefits & Retirement

VIII.1: If we provide insurance or other benefits plans to our employees, must we provide the same coverage to our employees with disabilities?.....31

VIII.2: What is the difference between a disability retirement plan and a service retirement plan?.....31

VIII.3: What if we need to cut back on our health care costs? What should we be aware of?.....32

VIII.4: Are we violating the ADA by offering only a service retirement plan and not a disability retirement plan?.....32

VIII.5: What types of plans offering disability retirement or service retirement benefits would violate the ADA?.....32

VIII.6: What about “other workplace benefits” that demand ADA accommodation?.....32

IX. Emergency Planning

IX.1: Can we ask whether or not employees will require assistance because of a disability in the event of a workplace evacuation?.....35

IX.2: How can we go about identifying those employees who may require assistance during an emergency while staying within the legal framework of the ADA?.....35

IX.3: In the event of an evacuation, are we allowed to disclose medical information to rescuers?.....35
